

A Little Update from Kisiizi

August–September 2026

It has been nearly three months since I returned to Kisiizi, and life has settled into a surprisingly full and happy rhythm. I am working clinically in the Emergency Department, helping with research, teaching Sunday school, caring for children, and finding plenty of opportunities to share meals and time with friends and colleagues. My little house has become something of a revolving door – friends come to visit, colleagues finishing late shifts often arriving hungry, and, on one memorable evening, a goat wandered straight through my open front door!

Life at the Hospital

Kisiizi continues to be busy, with patients often needing more than the hospital has available. I have been learning my way around the Emergency Department, getting to know new colleagues, and slowly finding my rhythm again.

A Little Blessing

One of the sweetest additions to my days has been Blessing, a little boy in our nursery who is now nearly four months old. He was found abandoned shortly after birth and arrived at Kisiizi extremely sick, requiring strong antibiotics, platelet transfusions, and constant monitoring. Many wondered whether he would survive even a few days. Today, he is growing, smiling, and very much loved. Many days he comes home with me, where he eats, sleeps, gets cuddled, and generally takes over the house. I have to admit, I am quite happy to let him.

Thank You

I am especially grateful for the many people who have made it possible for me to be here. I now have 33 monthly financial partners and have surpassed my original pre-departure fundraising goal. This support provides greater stability for my three-year commitment while also allowing me to respond to many needs around me, including Blessing's diapers, clothing and expensive formula, as well as helping friends in difficult circumstances.

Thank you for praying, giving, sending messages, and following along from home. Your support has made a real difference in allowing me to be here.
